Young People to go to Court for Buying Cigarettes

Proposed anti-smoking legislation will send young people under 18 years to court for buying cigarettes. This is one of the recommendations of a review of tobacco legislation affecting young people.

The Queensland Government is presently drafting legislation on the supply of tobacco products to young people. The main elements of the proposed law will be:

- penalising young people who purchase tobacco products with a formal police caution or a reprimand from the courts, although it will not be an offence to smoke;
- an increase in the age at which young people can purchase tobacco products from 16 to 18 years;
- ☐ the introduction of penalties up to $4,800 for selling tobacco products to a person under 18 years.

Queensland Health has been reviewing legislation covering young people and smoking over the past year. This area is presently covered by the "Juvenile Smoking Suppression Act of 1905". Although this law prohibits smoking for Queensland

by those under 16 years, there has not been one prosecution over the last 89 years! In the past, police have seen smoking as a health issue rather than a legal issue and have not prosecuted.

The draft legislation is the result of consultations with a range of interested parties, including manufacturers, retailers, government departments, health lobbyists and others. YANQ, the Youth Justice Coalition and the Australian Association for Adolescent Health also participated in the review. All three groups argued that education focussing on a healthy lifestyle was a more appropriate strategy than legal penalties for young smokers.

Lindsay Granger

Queensland Health is anticipating that a draft of the new Bill will be developed by the end of March 1994. If you would like more information or if you would like to comment on this issue ring Lindsay at YANQ on (07) 852 1800 or 008177 899.

Coordinating Committee Update Jan - Feb 94

WELCOME ABOARD CHERYL

Following a Committee decision in late 1993 Cheryl Quincey has been appointed as a Clerical Trainee under the Jobskills Training Program.
Cheryl's placement with YANQ commenced on 14 February and will conclude on 12 August 1994.

Farewell to Elei, Judith and Gerald

It is with regret that we say farewell to three Coordinating Committee members who have tendered their resignations from the YANQ Committee - Elei Feraimo, Judith Rowell and Gerald Appo. We thank each of them for their contribution and support and wish them all the best for the future.

Decisions Made January - February 1994

That YANQ auspice the NESB Youth Issues Working Party application to fund a Grants In Aid Project.

That conferences organised by YANQ not be held at licensed venues and, where this is not possible, to ensure that alcohol is not promoted to conference participants. In addition, that active steps be taken to promote enjoyable non-alcoholic beverages.

That the Coordinating Committee review existing wage scales, together with a review of the employment conditions of staff, and that this be part of an Industrial Agreement Review Process.

That YANQ auspice
WAYWARDS's application for funding for a 1994 Youth Week Project on the provision that it is made clear that YANQ's role is a purely mechanistic one.

Restoring Full Employment

An Overview of the Discussion Paper by the Committee on Employment Opportunities

On 15 December 1993 the Federal Government's Committee on Employment Opportunities released its discussion paper, "Restoring Full Employment." The discussion paper purports to offer a blueprint for a comprehensive solution to unemployment, particularly I ongterm unemployment. The discussion paper and subsequent responses will form the basis of the Federal Government's White Paper on Unemployment, to be released in May 1994.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the White Paper process last May fuelled community hopes that the Government would adopt innovative approaches to labour market programs, industry policy, job creation and income support. However, while the paper offers some positive ideas, and rejects some bad ones, such as across-the-board wage cuts, overall it suggests a "more of the same" approach.

The major initiative offered by the Committee is the Job Compact. Under the Job Compact, the long-term unemployed (in this case those out of work for more than 18 months) will be offered six to nine months of paid work experience. Refusal of any "reasonable" offer of work will result in withdrawal of unemployment benefits for a period of time. It is suggested that people employed under the Compact may be paid under-award wages for a period of time as an incentive for employers to take them on.

The paper's other recommendations relate to training, reform of the Commonwealth Employment Service, and changes to income support arrangements aimed, at encouraging recipients to undertake substantial part-time work.

It is disappointing that new approaches to the problem of unemployment have not been explored. The discussion paper continues the focus on supply-side responses that have clearly been ineffective in the 80s. While it proposes some useful strategies for dealing with the issue of long-term unemployment, there are major areas of concern which have been overlooked.

First, while Chapter 1 on Labour Market Trends acknowledges that particular population groups experience relative disadvantage in the labour market, the Paper's recommendations focus almost entirely on duration of unemployment as a barrier to finding work. There is virtually no attempt to deal with other factors which determine a person's labour market prospects, such as age, location, gender, race or ability.

... the Paper rejects the notion of creating employment, relying instead on labour market programs, training and continued private sector growth as the primary responses to unemployment.

Second, the Committee appears to have assumed that the National Training Reform Agenda will deal with the problem of youth unemployment. There is little acknowledgment that these reforms are themselves dependent on the creation of sufficient entry points into employment to enable the integration of skills training and work.

Third, the Paper rejects the notion of creating employment, relying instead on labour market programs, training and continued private sector growth as the primary responses to unemployment. The Paper sees an extremely limited role for government in taking action to ensure the creation of jobs.

Fourth, despite the focus on the private sector's role in generating employment, there is a limited role ascribed to industry policy. In the current poorly regulated economy, an active industry policy is one of the only instruments available to the government to ensure investment by business is productive, and therefore creates jobs, rather than speculative in nature.

Fifth, while some reforms to the social security system are proposed, the report is silent on the question of incomes for young people.

Tim Wilson

YANQ's Employment Working Party is in the process of drafting a detailed response to the discussion paper. Submissions are due by the 11 March 1994. If you would like further details on the discussion paper or YANQ's response, contact Tim Wilson, YANQ's Policy and Research Officer on (07)852 1800.

YANQ WORKING PARTY UPDATES

The Employment Working Party has been developing a response to "Restoring Full Employment", the discussion paper prepared by the Committee on Employment Opportunities. The responses to the paper will inform the development of a White Paper on Full Employment, to be released by the Federal Government in May this year. YANQ's response stresses the need to:

- a create employment:
- ensure young people have access to labour market programs and training:
- promote economic growth; and
- improve young people's incomes.

The Working Party is also draffing a comprehensive employment policy for YANO

The Rural and Isolated Working Party has developed a workplan for the year. This will include:

- the publication of a rural services directory for young people;
- the development of a written policy position;
- promotion of YANQ membership in rural areas; and
- ☐ a search for resources to maintain the Working Party into 1995.

 The Working Party is still developing a structure which will allow input from both isolated towns and regional centres.

The Recreation Working Party is attempting to collect information and research which will enable it to prepare a written recreation policy for YANQ. It is drawing particularly on needs analyses conducted in consultation with young people at a local level. The Working Party expects to have a draft prepared in time to present it to the 1994 Policy Forum in September.

These Working Parties meet monthly and any enquiries can be directed to Tim Wilson at YANQ on (07) 852 1800 or (008) 177 899.

The ATSI Working Party's Networking Project moved a step closer to reality last week when Youth Minister Bob Gibbs approved part-funding for the project. Aiming to develop a statewide network of Aboriginal and Islander youth services in Queensiand, the project is seeking cross-funding from a number of State Government departments. The commitment from Tourism, Sport and Racing has raised the Working Party's hopes that other departments will soon follow suit and that the project will get underway in April 1994. At its first meeting for 1994 the Working Party also discussed the role of ATSI young people in the AYPAC national conference to be held in Sydney, 7-9 July. Some funding may be available to subsidise the attendance of young people and youthworkers.

The ATSI Working Party meets monthly at YANQ and any enquiries can be directed to Mark King on (07) 371 9304 or Lindsay Granger on (07) 852 1800 or (008) 177 899.

Young

Homeless

Allowance

Under Threat

As mentioned in the last edition of Network Noise, a Parliamentary Committee has been appointed to inquire into the availability and appropriateness of the Young Homeless Allowance, in the wake of widespread media criticism of the Allowance.

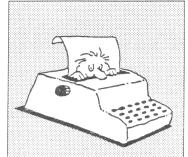

GIVEN THE ORIGINS of the Review, it can be guaranteed that the Committee will be examining whether eligibility requirements for the allowance should be tightened. As members are aware, the current criteria are the most stringent applied to any form of income support.

However, while the Review does pose some threats to the allowance, it is also an opportunity to inform politicians and the community about the problems with the current system and to urge responsible reforms which respect young people's rights.

Members are urged to respond to the Review. The Inquiry is calling for submissions up until the 15 March, with public hearings after March. You can be certain that parents' groups will be well represented at the hearings. It is vital that advocates for young people are visibly arguing the case for improvements to the administration and adequacy of the allowance.

Tim Wilson

Submissions and inquiries should be directed to Bjarne Nordin, Secretary, House of Representatives Standing Committee on Community Affairs, Parliament House, Canberra ACT 2600.

YANQ Policy Submissions Available

YANQ has had input into a wide variety of consultation processes conducted by government over the last twelve months. Written submissions have been prepared on the following issues:

- Public Sector
 Management
 Commission Review of the Police Service
- ☐ Task Force on Alternative Care
- Queensland Law Reform Commission's Review of Young People's Ability to Consent to Medical Treatment
- Review of the Mental Health Act
- Review of the Child Protection Legislation.

On the Road Again

YANQ Staff attend Regional Meetings

March - May 1994

YANQ's Network Development Coordinator, Lindsay Granger, will be attending a series of regional interagency meetings throughout Queensland to inform the youth sector about YANQ and its activities for 1994.

Lindsay will be attending meetings between March and May in a large number of centres (see schedule below). Major items for discussion at these meetings include:

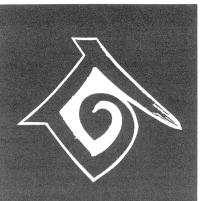

- ☐ "Making a Difference" the 1994 Queensland Youth Affairs Conference;
- ☐ 1994 YANQ Policy Forum; and
- ☐ YANQ Working Parties.

Lindsay will also be able to provide information and answer questions about membership, projects, policy and other YANQ issues. Feedback will also be sought from regional members about YANQ services.

International

Year of the Family

1994 has been designated by the United Nations as International Year of the Family. In Queensland, the Department of Family Services and Aboriginal and Islander Affairs has responsibility for planning and coordinating activities.

Several activities for the International Year of the Family are planned, including a statewide information and awareness-raising campaign focusing on valuing young people. Small non-recurrent grants will be available to ensure community participation in the International Year of the Family. A National Council has been appointed which will consult with the community and stimulate both public debate and significant reform of programs and services for families across the country.

A logo for International Year of the Family is available for use by contacting the Secretariat on (07) 224 7726.

National Forum on

Refugee Young People

THE FORUM was organised by the Ethnic Youth Issues Network in conjunction with the Australian Bicentennial Multi-cultural Foundation (ABMF) and the Australian Youth Foundation (AYF). The aim was to create greater understanding and awareness amongst workers and key policy makers to the plight of refugee and asylum seeker young people, and provide an opportunity to explore solutions to the concerns raised.

Issues covered on the day included: the experiences of young refugees who have survived or witnessed family and friends being tortured or violated against, or lived in atrocious conditions in refugee camps, and the overwhelming sense of dislocation and alienation felt in attempting to resettle in a new country. Accommodation options are extremely limited for most of the newly arrived refugee young people, often moving around for a number of years through a variety of inappropriate living arrangements. Governments agencies and bodies often have little or no understanding of their situations and therefore are not responding appropriately.

Mr Hass Dellal of the ABMF said, "These young people have little and in some cases, no access to mainstream services whilst their applications are being assessed". The particular concerns of asylum seekers of post-secondary school age were also discussed. These young people cannot study here without having to pay overseas students' fees ($6,000 - $8,000). They are not allowed to hold Medicare or Health Care cards, and are ineligible for benefits from the Department of Social Security.

Forum participants authorised the organising committee to establish a representative group to take up the recommendations outlined at the forum and investigate how these can be developed into a detailed plan of action. Key government department representatives, and statewide and national organisations will be invited to participate in the follow-up action from the Forum.

YACCA State Seminar to be held in September

YANQ has gained funding to host a 2-day seminar for YACCA projects in Queensland. The seminar will be held on 5-6 September at the Kondari Resort in Hervey Bay and will immediately precede the 1994 Queensland Youth Affairs Conference (to be held at the same venue). Funding has been provided to cover the costs of representatives from each YACCA project to attend, which will provide the first opportunity for all Queensland project workers to develop networks, practice strategies and policy. A Steering Group has been established to plan the seminar and further information will shortly be available through YACCA newsletters or is available by contacting YANQ on (008) 177 899 or (07) 852 1800.

YOUTH SECTOR EXPRESSES CONCERNS ABOUT YOUNG PEOPLE AND MENTAL HEALTH

THE FORUM heard that the recent Mental Illness Inquiry, conducted by the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission, had been highly critical of all the states for their treatment of young people with a mental illness. The Inquiry was particularly critical of Queensland which spends less per capita on mental health than the other states.

The Forum provided participants with an overview of the major findings and recommendations of the Inquiry (these were summarised in the December '93 edition of Network Noise). Eric Moes and Bettina Judd from Brisbane Youth Service discussed their experiences of working with young people with a mental illness. According to Bettina and Eric, many of these young people had received some treatment from the mental health system, but in many cases this assistance had been provided with little follow-up, and by organisations which were poorly equipped to deal with the needs of highly disadvantaged young people. They suggested that the development of long-term, trusting relationships was the basis for effectively assisting this group.

On 10 February 1994 approximately 80 youthworkers, health workers and mental health workers attended a Mental Health Forum hosted by YANQ in Fortitude Valley.

Dr Harvey Whiteford, Queensland's Director of Mental Health, acknow-ledged the enormous gaps in services for mentally ill young people. He informed the group that the Mental Health Branch of the Health Department was currently reviewing the types of services provided to young people, with a view to reforming services over the next three years. An extra $6 million has been allocated to services for young people over this period. James Finn, from Youth and Family service in Logan

City, is a member of the review group. (James can be contacted on (07) 208 8199).

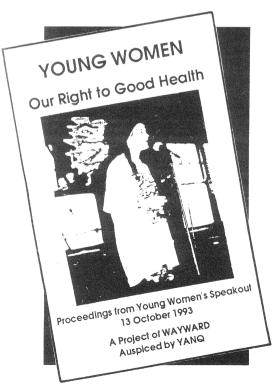

After hearing the Health Department's plans on the issue, partici-pants broke into small groups to discuss strategies which could be pursued at regional and statewide levels. Among the strategies identified were:

- better training for communitybased and institutional youth and health workers;
- the provision of transitional services for young people leaving hospital; and
- improved coordination between relevant government departments.

Proceedings of the day are being published and outcomes of the Forum will be forwarded to the Health Minister.

Young Women

Our Right To Good Health

In October 1993 a speakout on young women as health consumers was held as part of Youth Week. Coordinated by WAYWARD (Women Alongside Young Women for Action, Research and Development), the speakout attracted approximately 60 young women from metropolitan Brisbane and beyond.

Young women discussed health issues ranging from pre- and post-natal care, gynaecological examinations, and domestic violence, to health rights and their treatment by health professionals. Health professionals attended afternoon sessions to hear young women's opinions.

The report "Young Women: Our Right To Good Health" includes speeches by young women and guest speakers, photos, and documents background information to the speakout, details of the day and an evaluation.

AYPAC

YOUTH GATHERING '94

7-9 July 1994 Sydney

The Australian Youth Policy and Action Coalition (AYPAC) is holding a Youth Gathering '94 conference, 7-9 July in Sydney.

The aim of the conference is to stimulate debate and attract community attention to youth issues. It will also represent a partnership of young people and those that work with young people.

The conference will run from Thursday to Saturday, with the Saturday including a large Expo event with stalls staffed by agencies and organisations in the youth sector. This event will be open to the public and the media.

AYPAC is consulting with youth organisations about what they are able to contribute to the conference and what they would hope to get out of it. AYPAC is keen to hear from young people directly on their expectations of the conference. We would appreciate your assistance in distributing this flyer through your networks.

Young Writers

Youth Gathering '94 will have its own conference newspaper being produced by a team of young people. Subsidies to attend the conference may be available for these young people.

Health Posters

As part of the Saturday Expo event AYPAC is hoping to include an exhibition of health education posters (and other visual material) targeted at young people. The exhibition will include historical as well as contemporary material, conservative and contentious campaigns, and posters which are pretty, as well as scary. As long as it is about health (including HIV/AIDS education) and targeted at young people, we want a copy.

If you have material which should be seen more broadly we would appreciate hearing from you. Or just send us a copy of the material. If required, posters can be returned after the exhibition.

Please fill in this "Expression of Interest" form and return it to AYPAC. We hope to see you at Youth Gathering '94.

AYPAC Young Spokesperson

BONNY BRIGGS as has been appointed AYPAC Young Spokesperson for 1994.

Bonny is a young Murri woman from the Gamilaroi tribe in north-western New South Wales. For the past four years she has been involved in HIV/AIDS and safe sex education with at risk young people, using a model of harm minimisation. Speaking to AYPAC Bonny said,

"As a member of AYPAC I am pleased they have taken the initiative in creating a Young Spokesperson position. This is a logical step towards getting more young people participating in decisions being made that affect them. Young people need to see other young people speaking about their lives, and the broader issues. I believe that if we're not a part of the solution, then we must be part of the problem."

AYPAC's Youth Participation Committee first raised the idea of a Young Spokesperson in December 1992. The aim of the position is to provide a role model for young people, to enhance opportunities for young people's involvement in AYPAC, provide a more positive media profile for AYPAC and to skill a young person in public liaison.

Bonny can be contacted via AYPAC on (06) 241 8055.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES STANDING COMMITTEE ON COMMUNITY AFFAIRS

The House of Representatives Standing Committee on Community Affairs has been asked by the Minister for Social Security, the Hon Peter Baldwin, MP, and the Minister for Health, Senator the Hon Graham Richardson, to inquire into and report to the Parliament on the following matters:

Inquiry into Aspects of Youth Homelessness

The provision of assistance for homeless youth requiring income support, with particular reference to:

- the availability of family support and welfare services (including mediation services), their role and effectiveness in reducing homelessness and in resolving differences before young people leave home;
- the integration of income support provisions for homeless young people with services that assist with family reunion, transition to stable independent living and opportunities for education, training and employment; and
- the appropriateness of income support arrangements for homeless young people, noting the need to not create undue incentives to leave home or school.

Inquiries should be directed to the Secretary, Mr Bjarne Nordin, telephone: (06) 277 4566.

The closing date for submissions is 15 March 1994.

AYPAC UPDATE AYPAC UPDATE AYPAC UPDATE

Youth Health

Action to be taken on health issues affecting young Australians was an outcome of a meeting of the National Representative Board of AYPAC held in Canberra on 12-13 February 1994. A harm reduction levy on the sale of all alcohol beverages which would finance prevention, education and training programs will be a major policy item for negotiation with the Federal Government. Other health initiatives include a call for increased funding of mental health outreach services for homeless young people and support for a national media campaign on eating disorders and young people.

Policy Responses

AYPAC is also developing a response to two major government policy papers. "Restoring Full Employment" the Government's discussion paper on employment and "Developing Australia", the Kelty redevelopment plan for regional Australia, have provided a huge policy development task for the AYPAC Secretariat. Policy Officer, Carol Croce, has been coordinating this task from AYPAC's Canberra office. Carol has been working closely with state peaks, including YANQ, on this project.

AYPAC is the peak nongovernment youth organisation in Australia. It publishes UP 2 DATE, a monthly newsletter for members. Phone (06) 241 8055.

YOUTH ENTERPRISE TRUST

The Youth Enterprise Trust assists disadvantaged young people into responsible and fulfilling careers by:

- □ sponsoring people between the ages of 16 and 20 years on a specially designed true wilderness program,
- □ helping these young people convert the personal enthusiasm and aspiration flowing from this remarkable wilderness experience into a practical vocational opportunity.

In 1993, the first program of the Youth Enterprise Trust took place, with a highly successful overall outcome (more about this below).

The wilderness program:

These special courses are conducted by Saddler Springs Education Centre which operates out of "Saddler Springs", a remote cattle property hidden away in a enclosed valley in the Carnarvon Ranges. Students on any one course come from a variety of backgrounds, some sponsored through YET, others self-paying, Aboriginal with non-Aboriginal, well-off and poor.

The practical vocational follow-up: It is crucial to bridge the gap between the newly found goals and the reality confronted by the young person upon return home. This is not done by duplicating existing services. YET works cooperatively with select youth organisations, prospective employers and a growing network to provide this practical assistance.

Last year, the founding program met with remarkable success in helping the participating young people gain a deeper understanding of themselves and of each other and a lasting appreciation of Australia's cultural and environmental heritage.

Most significantly, a large proportion of the graduates have identified their vocational directions and consequently, through their own initiative, have found appropriate jobs and/or training opportunities. Many are also concentrating on reconciling or progressing their personal and family relationships.

The way in which these young people deeply embraced the experience at

Founded in 1990, YET is a charitable body which is independent of government and other institutions. It is directed and formally advised by a number of outstanding citizens including, Archbishop Peter Hollingworth.

Saddler Springs and have translated it in thoughtful and practical steps since, has enriched the lives of the staff who shared it with them.

Staying in ongoing touch with the graduates is central to ensuring that follow-up support is continuously available. It will also provide the opportunity to create appropriate vocational and other links at any time in the future.

Expanding and strengthening our cooperative ties with other communitybased youth organisations which effectively complement our own program will, we believe, help to contribute in a small way toward the overall solution or our "youth problem".

We are now welcoming applications from disadvantaged young people to the 1994 Course Program, which will run from June to September (seven courses).

Sport and Recreation Directory for People with a Disability

The Sport and Recreation Directory for People with a Disability provides details on sport and recreation services for people with a disability, as well as organisations that are a valuable referral point or information source. This directory is a significant step forward in providing an awareness of services available in the diverse field of sport and recreation for people with a disability in Queensland.

1994 Sports directory

The Sports Directory provides details of Queensland's principal sporting organisations, including their key personnel and major sporting events to be conducted in this state during 1994. It is a useful; resource for people endeavouring to make contact with the appropriate person in Queensland sport to provide assistance and to find out what sporting events are coming up in Queensland.

The Yarmid Project

Young People with a Mild Intellectual Disability

The 1989 Burdekin Report highlighted the vulnerability and special needs of young people with an intellectual disability. Appropriate services, however, are still not reaching this group.

The Yarmid Project, (Action Research and Community Development for Young People at Risk with a Mild Intellectual Disability), is in the process of collecting data from service providers, and from young people aged 13-25 years with a mild intellectual disability. This information will form the basis of a funding submission to the DFSAIA for a project which will seek to develop ways of delivering appropriate services to these young people.

The Yarmid Project welcomes your input. If you are a service provider who works with or is in contact with young people with a mild intellectual disability please phone Anne Coleman on (07) 260 7414.

Why DIAL?

The Disability Information and Awareness Line (DIAL) has been developed to provide comprehensive information on disability services across the state. For many people with disabilities (almost 16% of Australia's population), a lack of information about the existence of such services denies them the opportunity to enjoy the same opportunities other members of society take for granted.

DIAL provides access to information on approximately 2000 disability specific services across Queensland at no charge. All you need to do is contact the DIAL Information Officer on the numbers listed below.

DIAL is available to

- people with disabilities;
- family members of people with disabilities;
- · carers
- friends of people with disabilities;
- government workers;
- service providers; and
- students.

DIAL information officers can:

- help you see what options there are
- help you find your way around the "system"
- refer you to agencies which can help
- send you computer printouts of the information you require

TWO HIGH

Brisbane's first ever Celebration of Young Women and the Arts

10 - 31 May 1994

La Boite Youth Theatre and Youth Arts Queensland are pleased to announce Brisbane's inaugural celebration of young woman and the arts. This event has been made possible through the support of the Brisbane City Council.

Two High aims to:

Celebrate

- the diversity and quality of young women's achievements in the arts; and
- young women's cultural diversity.

Recognise

- young women's experiences, knowledge and issues of concern; and
- the role the arts can play in the cultural development of a community.

Ensure young women's access to and participation in

• the broadest range of arts and cultural activities.

Network

- to establish, maintain and improve communication between individuals and organisations involved in the arts and cultural development;
- ideas and information between different cultural groups in the community;

• ideas and information between young women and more experienced arts workers.

Most of all Two High is about having fun and making new friends.

Two High will commence with an official launch at the Sitting Duck Cafe on Tuesday, 10 May with performances and exhibits by a diverse group of local artists. This will be followed by three weekends of workshops and events in various locations in and around Brisbane. The celebration will conclude with a final community event that will bring together everyone who has been involved in the month's activities

At this stage we would like to hear from individuals and organisations who are interested in being involved.

Growing Up FAST

"Growing Up Fast" is a film for parents and teenagers on a subject they know well ... being a teenager. It gives parents an interesting and entertaining insight into today's youth, and teenagers the chance to find out what their parents did growing up.

Growing Up Fast is the story of two generations of teenage glory: the baby boomers of the 1960s and the generation they made, the kids of the 90s. It's about the difference in attitudes, job opportunities and home life and street life. It shows

Australians in a new era of youth, kids who are growing up faster than ever before, faced with an uncertain future. Some of them are making it, others are not.

Teenagers in the 60s had it all money to spend, jobs galore, a booming economy and the family unit to fall back on. For the first time, teenagers were in a class of their own, a power group acknowledged by peers, alienated from adults and nurtured by big business. Bodgies, widgies, rockers, mods, sharpies, freaks and hippies rocked their parents. It was a time of rebellion, yet, at the same time, total conformity with peers.

Growing up in the 90's is different - the economy isn't booming anymore, there's no guarantee of a job and competition is tough with students forced to stay at school longer. The nuclear family is a thing of the past, as is sexual freedom, with the proliferation of STDs and AIDS.

"I don't think anything I've ever done or will do in my life will be as easy as what it has been for my parents." (Emma) Homeboys, metalheads, cyberpunks, waxheads, skins, ravers, and hundreds of other sub-cultures now tribalise society. It's a teenage revolution with a difference - leisure time overload.

The film incorporates archival footage, music spanning the decades and interviews with today's young people who reveal their dreams, fears and aspirations. Yet, the 90s kids still hold the optimism and hope characteristic of their parent's generation.

Growing Up Fast features: "046", a rap group from Campbelltown, in Sydney's western suburbs; Ravers enroute to a semi-legal dance party; Cyberpunks, the new-age hippies hooked on virtual reality in search for the perfect world; Asian students Ngan Sam, Maria and Linda; Shannon, a metal head living on the fringe without a future; Simon, a wax-head surfer into 60s music, thrash bands and meditation; and Emma, the new age woman - tough and determined to get ahead.

Brisbane Youth Service has recently completed a participatory research project looking into the needs of young people involved in opportunistic prostitution in the Fortitude Valley / City area. A report of the findings and recommendations, entitled "Between a Rock and a Hard Place," is now available.

"Between a Rock and a Hard Place" is the culmination of a three-month research project completed in December 1993. Funded through the Department of Family Services and Aboriginal and Islander Affairs as part of the YACCA Special Project initiatives, the project employed a research coordinator and a team of five young researchers.

The project found that a significant number of homeless young people swap sex for food, money, accommodation, drugs and security.

Between a Rock and a Hard Place

Report on the needs of young people involved in opportunistic prostitution

Opportunistic prostitution is practised in order to survive the day-to-day reality of poverty once young people leave home. The young people interviewed had all left home because of sexual, physical or emotional abuse. All the young people interviewed found the experience of opportunistic prostitution to be degrading and damaging, both mentally and physically. The issues for young people involved in opportunistic prostitution included safety, HIV/AIDS risks, powerlessness, self-esteem, poverty, drug use and lack of resources for dealing with any of these problems. Many quotes from young people have been used throughout the report to bring the information to life, as well as to ensure that it accurately reflected what young people wanted to highlight as their main concerns. The report concludes with a number of recommendations surrounding these issues.

As well as being informative and easy to read, the report can be used as a practical manual for participatory research projects similar to this one.

Susan Ferguson Research Coordinator

Limited copies of the report are available from Brisbane Youth Service on (07) 254 1131.

Train the Trainer

Cross-Cultural Awareness Workshop

21-23 March 1994

Presented by John Gunn International Trainer and Facilitator

Sponsored by

The Bureau of Ethnic Affairs,

Queensland Centre for Cross-Cultural Development and

The Department of Immigration and Ethnic Affairs

The workshop will cover important aspects of cross-cultural awareness, provide examples of cross-cultural training programs and assist participants to develop programs relevant to their own organisations. A practical approach with exercises, case studies, videos, stimulations and role plays is used to develop the knowledge and skills of all participants.

While the workshop provides background information on cultural diversity, it also presents a range of approaches to deal with ethnocentric, stereotypic and racist attitudes and behaviour. It looks at the impact of adjusting to a new culture and promotes effective cross-cultural communications skills.

A first for Community Radio

What does competency based training mean to you? Or recognition of prior learning? As a student or parent, do you need to know more about the changing role of TAFE? As an employer, are you seeking information about current labour market programs or assessing the effectiveness of your training under the Training Guarantee?

TalkingTraining, the weekly National Community Radio program on what is happening in vocational education and training, is designed to provoke you with the answers to questions such as these - and many more!

There are no easy solutions to the current frightening levels of unemployment, both of young people trying to find their first job, and men and women in mid-career experiencing loss of employment through restructuring or redundancy. Yet if we are to compete internationally, a skilled and flexible workforce committed to a philosophy of recurring and structured lifelong learning is essential.

Talking Training makes use of a magazine format with usually two, three of four discrete items. However from time to time, a full program is devoted to an issue or development of national interest. Good practice and innovation are featured regularly, along with information on sector developments and issues, training options conferences and related resource materials.

Brisbane City Council CULTURAL DEVELOPMENT GRANTS

Submissions are now called from community groups seeking funding for cultural development projects planned for the 1994/95 financial year under the BCC Cultural Development Grants Program.

The Cultural Development Grants Program aims to:

- foster the developing identity and unique character of Brisbane;
- encourage community participation in cultural activities; and
- support communities which have been previously disadvantaged through lack of access to cultural programs.

It is expected that most grants will be in the range of $2000 - $5000. These grants are not intended to cover the general operational or running costs of organisations.

Intending applicants should obtain a copy of the guidelines and an application form prior to seeking any further information on the grants program.

A workshop for intending applicants will be held on Saturday, 19 February, 1994 in the Sherwood Room, Brisbane City Hall from 10am to 1pm.

COMMONWEALTH DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES AND HEALTH

AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL COUNCIL ON AIDS

1995 Commonwealth AIDS Research Project Grants

Applications are invited for project grant support under the Commonwealth AIDS Research Grants (CARG) program for research in areas relating to HIV infection and its prevention.

Grants are awarded on a competitive basis, with support for successful applicants being available for periods of up to three years. Support for this round of applications will commence in January 1995.

Proposals for research into any aspects relevant to HIV and AIDS in Australia, will be considered in the broad range of biomedical, clinical and social sciences. Under the new HIV/AIDS Strategy 1993-94 to 1995-96 the priorities for the CARG program will be:

 Limiting the spread of HIV infection through research into ways in which transmission of the virus can be reduced or eliminated; studies to determine patterns of spread of infection and to define risks associated with different behaviours; identification of social, cultural and contextual influences which place individuals at risk; and development and evaluation of methodologies for groups that are hard to reach.

 Reducing harm to individuals and communities from HIV infection through investigation of the effect of HIV on the immune system; clinical and pharmacological research; assessment of new markers of infection; and examination of the social, cultural and other effects of infection on those infected and their carers, and of ways of limiting adverse effects.

Translating research into policy and practice by examination of social, ethical and policy responses.

An application must be submitted on the designated application form, through the administrative office of the institution which would be responsible for administering the grant. The closing date for applications is 18 March 1994.

Application forms and further information are available from:

Youth Subcultures

Theory, History and the Australian Experience

Edited by Rob White this publication provides an overview and survey of the work presently being done in Australia on youth subcultures and youth cultural activity. Youth Subcultures provides case-studies and historical sketches of young people engaged in a wide range of experiences. It explores the activities and behaviour of young people, drom the bodgies and widgies of the 1950s through to the goths and bogan of the 1990s. It examines the general circumstances underlying the creation of diverse youth subcultures, and reviews the theoretical debates on how to interpret the cultural experiences of young people in contemporary society. The first book of its kind, it provides an essential guide to the lifestyle and cultural concerns of young people in Australia today.

Children, Rights and the Law

Using the Convention on the Rights of the Child as a framework, the contributors to this volume (a special issue of the "International Journal of Law and the Family") set out to re-evaluate the advantages and disadvantages of approaching issues of children's welfare and well-being through the lens of a "rights" approach. The aim is to take a fresh look at these issues and to do so with specific reference to an international treaty that is certain to be ratified by a very large number of countries in every region of the world and which will soon be legally binding in many

An important resource for policy makers, service providers, teachers and students.

WARNING! Poverty is a health hazard

This is a detailed report on what disadvantaged people want from the Australian health system. It is the result of a consultation by ACOSS and the Consumers' Health Forum which canvassed the views of a range of groups, from unemployed young people in Northcote to Aboriginal communities in the Pilbara. The report presents a challenge to the health system and people concerned about economic and social inequalities.

Suicide Awareness

Training Manual

The Suicide Awareness Training Manual has been written to provide a practical and helpful resource for educators in the area of suicide awareness. It will help people:

- learn to understand the warning signs;
- dispel the myths;
- learn to recognise potentially suicidal people;
- understand the needs of survivors of suicide.

Education is one of the keys to preventing suicide. Sections included provide education for schools, parents, the general community and survivors of suicide. The manual also includes case studies, worksheets, resources and transparency outlines. The manual is available for $50.00 (plus $5.00 postage and handling) with reduced prices for additional or bulk copies.

A student handbook, Be a Friend for Life: Understanding Adolescent Suicide, has been written for use with the training manual. It can also be used alone to help a young person understand more about suicide. It includes myths and facts, warning signs, and gives some practical help for those around the suicidal adolescent. One section covers ways to help a friend or family who have had a loved one complete suicide. Another section shows how to recognise suicidal signs and what to do. The handbook is available for $2.00 with discounts for bulk orders.

Shadows and Whispers:

Sexual Abuse and the Social Problems of Young People

Examines the relationship between the crime of child sexual abuse and the later experience of drug-related problems, homelessness, suicidal behaviour and other social afflictions affecting young people. By Hayden Brown, available from YACVIC as a $25 package with "Young People and the Use of Prescription Pills", also by the same author.

Young People and the Use of Prescription Pills

Based on peer interviews this text explores the patterns, reasons and effects of minor tranquilizer use among young people and suggests practical means to alleviate the problem.

What It's Really Like: Young Parents Tell

What It's Really Like: Young Parents Tell is designed for use by anybody interested in, and working with, young people. The video was developed by Outreach/Health Workers in contact with pregnant and parenting young people, their partners, family and children and tells about their stories and experiences:

- Finding out about pregnancy what to do? who to tell?
- Accommodation renting? moving? where?
- Finance making ends meet
- Parenting expectations/realities
- Resources who helps/what helps

The video is available for $35.00 from Geelong Community Health Service, PO Box 861, Geelong VIC 3220.

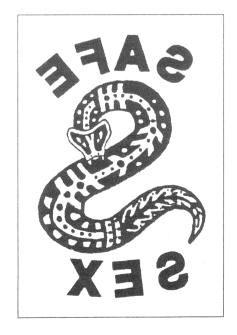

Streetwize Aids Posters

This new Streetwize Comics poster is designed to dispel some of the myths surrounding AIDS. The poster complements Streetwize Comic No. 15 with HIV/AIDS information for young people. It is available for $2 (for postage) from Streetwize Comics, 3 Queen Street, Glebe NSW 2037. ((02) 552 3499.

Safe Sex

The NSW Hands On Project has produced a poster using safe sex messages collected from activities run during workshops with workers and young people. The poster, together with an information magazine and a temporary tattoo (pictured) with a safe sex message, form a resource package which will be launched in early April 1994.

The Safe Sex package will be available for approximately $10-$20 from Michael at Hands On, Box 8, Trades Hall Building, 4 Goulburn St, Sydney 2000. (02) 267 6387 or fax (02) 267 8108.

YOUTH AFFAIRS NETWORK OF QUEENSLAND INC.

WHAT IS YANQ?

The Youth Affairs Network of Queensland (YANQ) Inc. is the independent, non-government umbrella organisation of groups and individuals from Queensland's youth sector.

Operational since 1989, YANQ was incorporated in January 1991. The Network acts to promote the interests and well-being of young people in Queensland, especially disadvantaged young people. It advocates for them to government and the community and encourages the development of policies and programs responsive to the needs of young people.

YANQ also supports the development of regional networks in the non-government youth sector. It is YANQ's view that the development of stronger networks will lead to better services for young people as information and skills are shared.

YANQ consists of over 450 individual and organisational members throughout Queensland, including youth services, advocacy groups, church groups and community organisations with interests in areas as diverse as juvenile justice, housing, health, rural issues, young people with disabilities, young women's issues and young people from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and non-English speaking backgrounds. Associate members are drawn from federal, state and local government bodies.

WHAT DOES YANQ DO?

YANQ employs three staff in its Brisbane-based secretariat. It undertakes a variety of activities designed to raise the profile of and encourage action on issues affecting young people. Activities include:

• submissions to government reviews • making representations to government/other influential bodies • undertaking campaigns and lobbying • consulting and liaising with members and the field • publishing newsletters and journals • initiating projects • disseminating information to members and the field • providing training and • cooperating with interstate and national youth affairs bodies.

HOW DOES YANQ WORK?

YANQ is managed by a Coordinating Committee elected by the Ordinary (non-government) membership to oversee its day to day operation and supervision of staff.

YANQ holds a Policy Forum at least once a year at which delegates representing the membership give direction for YANQ's policy-making and activities for the next twelve months. Delegates to Policy Forum must be Ordinary members.

YANQ working parties on specific issues may be formed at any time during the year. Any interested member may participate in such working parties.

YANQ's decision making processes are based on a consensus model.
